Caviar

ANTONIUS CAVIAR

A raw material defined by time and precision.

Caviar is one of the most exclusive ingredients in the world, but not because it is expensive. It is exclusive because it is difficult to get right.

At Antonius, we work with sturgeon that have spent up to 10–15 years developing.

When the roe is finally ready, there is only one exact moment to harvest it.

Hours can be the difference between a flat experience and one that lingers.

Much of the world's caviar is produced globally and repackaged in Europe before reaching the guest. At Antonius, we work differently.

In Poland we produce our own caviar from our own fish and our own farms, with full control over the entire process, from farming to serving.

We work with fresh, unpasteurized caviar. This means a shorter shelf life, but a far more vibrant experience.

We do not use stabilizing additives such as E285 (borax) in our own caviar. Instead, we work with the raw ingredient as it is and ensure that the quality is present from the very beginning.

It is a more difficult path, but it is also the right one.

Oysters

Santinel oysters

Served with lemon, tabasco and mignonette

3 pcs. 110,- or 6 pcs. 200,-

Santinel oysters are an exclusive type of oyster from France with a distinct sea note and a firm, juicy texture.

They often have a light salty finish, making them very popular among oyster lovers who prefer a classic and elegant tasting experience.

Gillardeau oysters

Served with lemon, tabasco and mignonette

3 pcs. 165,- or 6 pcs. 300,-

What makes Gillardeau oysters special is their perfect balance between sweetness and salt, a creamy texture, and a clean, almost nutty aftertaste.

They are often considered some of the best oysters in the world and are highly sought after in restaurants and among gourmet enthusiasts.
